Tutorial Video Recording Highlights Capto Update

September 21, 2016: Atlanta, GA & Udupi, India — Global Delight today launched the latest and most advanced version of Capto, its screen capturing, screen recording and editing app for Mac OS Yosemite and later. An all-new Camera video recording feature has been added to its existing screen-recording feature in the latest update. It is also powered with dual audio editing options to help make professional tutorial videos, how-to videos, and reaction videos.

The newly added feature of camera video recording, while the screen recording continues in parallel, is to help the user make interactive videos. The update also enables users to use either the system camera or an external recording device for the same. The user is able to re-size the camera video input as well as re-position it at different locations on the screen.

The second major update also targets and compliments the job of tutorial video making. The introduction of the dual audio editing feature gives the user better control over the audio enabling them to individually adjust the volume from the system and the microphone. Both inputs are available as separate tracks and may be adjusted individually for desired output.

Jason Foodman, President, Global Delight excitedly shared, “We were overwhelmed by the positive response to Capto and we’re constantly keeping an eye on the user reviews – the thing we kept hearing over and over was the need for making effective tutorial videos. Our team is proud to introduce the recent version of Capto, which makes tutorial video creation effective, easy and quick, without compromising on the quality. We are proud to bring this new version of Capto to the market and eager to see the reaction.”

Guruprasad Kamath, Director of Marketing, Global Delight said, “We are happy to report that over 300 schools/colleges are now making use of Capto. The new features in this release will certainly help the teachers and trainers create their training materials easily and conduct online lectures conveniently.
